

2012 Claude Bernard Distinguished Lectureship of the Teaching of Physiology Section of the American Physiological Society

Grantor: American Physiological Society

Closes: 5/15/2011

Maximum: $3,000.00

2012 Claude Bernard Distinguished Lectureship of the Teaching of Physiology Section of the American Physiological Society

The 2012 Claude Bernard Distinguished Lectureship of the Teaching of Physiology Section award is presented to an educator who is making outstanding contributions to teaching and learning as it relates to physiology education. The educator may be an APS member or a non-member nominated by a member. The awardee's talk is expected to further interest in and enhancement of educational practices that are relevant to teachers of physiology.

The award consists of a $1000 honorarium, up to $2000 travel reimbursement to Experimental Biology, complimentary registration to the meeting, and complimentary tickets to the Section dinner. Self-nomination is permitted for APS members. Nominators must upload a nomination letter and nominee's curriculum vitae by May 15, 2011.

Link: <http://www.the-aps.org/meetings/eb10/awards/teaching.htm>

Categories: Academia, Academic Medicine, Distinguished Service, Medical Education, Medical Faculty, Physiology , Science Education

Audience: Academic, Educator, Medical School Faculty, Physician Researcher, Physiologist, Science Educator